Helping You Create and Implement Transformational Academic and Career Planning for Students of all Ages

Individual Career and Academic Plans (ICAPs) are the product of a 2009 legislative bill that requires high schools to offer career and college planning resources for students. Through these plans, students reflect on their skills and strengths, explore career and education opportunities and map out steps for reaching their goals. Although the plans are designed for high school students, middle-school students, ex-offenders, adult learners and other populations benefit from the activities.

• College In Colorado as a Leader in this Work

→ CIC offers a wide array of career and academic planning resources that are free, easy to use, and help learners build a life-long portfolio. The online Professional Center for CollegelInColorado.org gives you access to a built-in template with ICAP career and education activities that you can customize to fit your needs. CIC created the template with flexibility in mind so you can incorporate pieces of the plans into a school day or any length of existing curriculum. With College In Colorado, you and your learners can enjoy these additional benefits:

- ✓ Ability to review and track users' progress
- ✓ 80+ lesson plans that fit in existing curriculum
- ✓ Worksheets that help users document career and education interests
- ✓ Tools that allow users to save activities in their portfolio
- ✓ Work that auto-populates when students move from school to school

College In Colorado

"Through College In Colorado, one of our students discovered her passion was gaming design. With additional research into her interests, she landed a job shadow with the marketing department at our college, and plans to continue there on a work-study after she enrolls. She realizes gaming design is still her biggest interest, but she enjoys creating videos and learning more about the particulars of graphic design. We are so thankful that we had College In Colorado to help us guide this young lady into realizing her passion."
